Year : 11		Course : Drama				Mrs L Simeon			Total Credits : 12
Students involved in drama are engaged as dramatic artists, critics, historians and social commentators. They learn to control and manage the elements of drama in order to make their own drama or to interpret and recreate existing drama, and in the process develop skills in a range of areas such as acting, directing, play writing, technical theatre and design. As dramatic critics, students respond to drama in a range of ways, from spontaneous to critically analytical. As dramatic historians and social commentators, students place their own dramas in the context of contemporary New Zealand society. They consider past and present New Zealand drama, and the drama of other cultures and societies.
